SUPER-VARIABLE; STALIN WORKS, AND
LEARN.
WHILE DOCTORS ARGUED,
A ROYAL CONVERSATION.

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

You see a tumble-bug, in a huge
pasture, rolling his precious little sphere toward the entrance to his spherehouse underground. What could you say that would interest
that tumble-bug more than that little globe, carefully fashioned for winter nourishment? Nothing.

Astronomers at Harvard university have discovered a "super-giant"
variable, far out in the Milky way,
in the large cloud of Magellan.

That new super-giant flashes
with a brilliancy that varies from 12,000 to 33,000 times that of our sun, at a distance of 90,000 light
years from the earth, one light year
is about six trillion years.

If our earth fell into the sun, it would disappear in dust before reaching the sun's surface. If our sun fell into the huge super-giant variable, it would vanish like a flake of snow on a red-hot stove.

For that reason, it is all too big
to be comfortable, and we come back to the satisfying contemplation of something that we can understand, to the fact that Max
Schmeling has returned to Germany, or that "big steel" closed
at 103%.

Trotsky, exiled from Russia, says
only 5 per cent of Russians live
as "Socialists" and wants Russia to put Stalin out of power. That suggests a fable in which the mice decided that somebody should put a bell on the cat, that all might know
when the cat was coming. No mouse
wanted the job of "belling the cat."

Stalin retains his power, and accumulates knowledge of human beings as he goes along.

Everything is easy in theory. He
that would not undertake to build a bridge across a 10-foot stream
cheerfully will undertake to change
a system of human government.

Stalin, head man of Russia,
learns as he goes, and is willing to be taught. He has abandoned the noble theory that all men, being equal, should receive the same wages.
He needs skillful men, and finds
that skillful men resent too much equality.

It isn't that they want more, but
they want recognition of their skill.
Wise Stalin arranges things accordingly.

He announces that "more individuality is needed in industry," which is another way of saying that the person who develops individuality
in the way of ability will get extra pay.

Blind hatred of Russia, shown by
some of our respectable citizens,
public officials and industrialists is an interesting development of near-sighted foolishness.

Russia's success would be the best possible thing for our so-called
"capitalistic system."

To make a man conservative,
make him rich. What could be better for the world than to have the 150,000,000 people in Russia's 1,000-000 villages develop successful industries, and great national wealth?

If a gigantically rich people of 120,000,000 on this continent is a good thing for the world, why
wouldn't another gigantically rich
people of 150,000,000 in eastern Eu-

SERVICE CHIEF
ASKS BOOST IN WATER SUPPLY

Reich announces He'll put Proposal Up to Council Tonight

PLANT DEMANDS
ARE INCREASED

Finances For 1932 Also Listed For Discussion By Solons

Service Director Clyde R. Reich
today announced he would make a request at tonight's meeting of council that action be taken toward increasing the city's water supply.

Reich expressed the opinion that
an increase in the amount of water
used by the city will necessitate purchase of an additional source.

The J. G. Smith wells, located in the northwest section of the city,
were mentioned as a possible solution.

Used By Plants
The service director explained
that city water is now being used extensively by manufacturing plants
here, causing a sharp increase in consumption. More than a million gallons are being pumped daily.

Reich said, the normal consumption up to three months ago having been approximately 900,000 gallons.

The heat wave also has helped to increase consumption of water, according to Reich, but the main cause is the amount of water being used by plants which, up to a short time ago, did not use city water.

Council will also discuss plans
for the formation of the city's financial budget for 1932. The financial committee, composed of L. R.
Cobb, C. D. Baker and D. U. Smith,
will confer with City Auditor Helen R. Woerther on estimated needs of various departments.

Departmental heads will file requests for funds needed with Miss Woerther and the council committee within the next week, the auditor said today.

Funds For Bonds
An important item in the 1932
budget will be funds to be used for retirement of matured bonds and
payment of interest on bonds, Miss Woerther stated. A total of $88,955
will be used for this purpose out of general taxation while the waterworks department will expend $14-990 towards the payment of debts.

Payment on special assessment
bonds will total more than $58,000.
Delinquent taxes may cause a decrease in amount of money the city
will obtain from the county in general taxation, the auditor declared.

She explained that while the city's financial condition is by no means
excellent, the situation at the same time is not serious and it appears probable that all departments will be granted sufficient funds to carry on work as in past years.

The finance committee and Miss Woerther will outline the budget
following which it will be submitted to council for approval. It must be acted on and sent to the county
budget commission not later than
July 25, the auditor stated.

Auto Fees Paid Back
By Southern State

The state of Georgia has remitted to Ohio truck owners all Georgia license plate fees and fines collected in that state, and now the commissioner of motor vehicles,
Chalmers R. Wilson, has directed County Auditor J. H. Irwin to return to the management of Downie
Bro. circus of Macon, Ga., the $322.88 collected from the outfit
when it recently played East Liverpool.

Romance Ends

Loretta Young, pretty movie
star, whose elopement with Grant Withers, also of the films, brought down parental
wrath slightly more than a year
ago, has found the end of her
romance and is suing for divorce. Grant hasn't provided his Loretta with the "common necessities of life," she declares.

Both are shown above in a loving pose. But that's all over.

the Union Savings & Loan company, director of the Community
bank and secretary-treasurer of the Buckeye club, was found dead of a heart attack in his apartment in the Ingram building, Diamond
highway, by Chief of Police H. J.
McDermott Monday at 4 p. m.

Funeral Wednesday
Funeral services will be held in the home of his niece, Mrs. Alice McConnell, West Fifth st., at 2 p. m.
Wednesday, in charge of Rev. J. H.
Lawler, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev.
J. F. Drane, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church. Attorney Blaine H. Cochran will sing. Ritualistic services will be held at the McConnell home tonight at 8 by the Elks lodge, of which Mr. Fowler was a charter member.

Mr. Fowler was born July 3, 1851, near Pughtown, W. Va., a son of the late William Baker and Anna Pugh Fowler.

He had lived here for 64 years, retiring from active business about 45 years ago.

Learned Carpenter Trade
With his brother John M. Fowler,
Mr. Fowler learned the carpenter
trade after attending the East Liverpool public schools. He and his brother bought the Union Planning Mill & Lumber company from the McIntosh brothers and operated it for many years. It was later sold to the late W. L. Smith.

For many years he was engaged
in real estate operations.

He is survived by two brothers,
John Quinn A. Fowler and R.
Patterson Fowler of East Liver-
pool.

Investigating

COLUMBIANA, July 7.—Charles
L. Liston, 60, was held up and robbed of $44 in cash and a watch
valued at $50 by a bandit who escaped after locking his victim in
the Ohio Edison Power and Light
company plant here today.

Liston, employed by the Ohio
Edison company, arrived at the plant at 7:15 a. m. and as he was unlocking a rear door, was approached by the bandit from the rear. A revolver was forced into his side and he was forced to hold his hands in the air while the bandit searched him.

Keys for Liston's automobile were taken, together with the money and watch, after which Liston was pushed into the power company
building and locked in. He was later released by fellow employees arriving for work shortly before 8 a.
m.

Police were notified but no trace
was obtained of the bandit.

Although he took Liston's automobile keys, the bandit did not molest the former's car, parked near
the power plant.

FORGERY CHARGE

Thomas Lewis of Near Greenford

Davidson Today

Thomas Lewis of Greenford, alleged to have passed questionable
bank checks for $105, is being held in city jail today on a charge of forgery.

Lewis is charged by police with having issued three checks on the Farmers National bank of Canfield
for $41, $38 and $26. The affidavit
for his arrest was signed by Dan Pearson of near Salem.

The man will be arraigned before Mayor J. M. Davidson this afternoon. Police Chief T. W. Thompson said.

Garsuch of Lisbon, arrested
last week on charges of operating a motor vehicle without a license and interfering with an officer, today
was fined $25 and costs on each
charge by Mayor Davidson.

Both Lewis and Garsuch were arrested by Patrolman Ralph Stoffer.

Emperor of Oil, 92
Tomorrow, Will Put
In An Hour of Work

NEW YORK, July 7.—John
D. Rockefeller, emperor of oil,
will be 92 tomorrow and his birthday schedule will observe
the old adage: Business before pleasure.

Arising early, the elderly capitalist is expected to spend an hour or so in the forenoon at work.

Despite his age, Mr. Rockefeller's health was described by his representatives as "excellent." Although his labors of former years are now in large part transferred to other shoulders, he likes to keep in touch with the multitudinous affairs of the Rockefeller interests.

If the weather is fine, his representatives said, he'll probably play a round of golf and
take his daily motor ride
through his far-flung estate at Pocantico Hills.

In the evening there will be a birthday dinner for just the members of his family, including his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the grandchildren.

5 INSTRUCTORS

LEETONIA BOARD

One at High School
Given Places

LEETONIA, July 7.—The appointment of five new teachers to positions in the Leetonia school district
was approved by the board of education at a meeting here Monday night.

H. O. Peterson of Mansfield will succeed Miss Helen Orr as instructor of English and French in the Leetonia high school.

Miss Martha Alberta of Monroe-
ville, primary teacher, and Miss May Weizenecker of Beloit are assigned to the Washingtonville
building.

Miss Laura McCormick of Lisbon and Miss Deborah Blaine of Kirkville, grade teachers, are unassigned.

Will Install Furnace
Work started today in the Wash-
ingtonville building on the installation of a new warming and ventilating system by the American Warming and Ventilating company
of Cleveland.

Four new furnaces, each designed
to heat two rooms, will be installed.
E. C. Holt, president of the district board of education, announced today. The system, costing $6,200 under the contract let to the Cleveland concern, is a modern mechanical warm air heating and ventilating type.

An agreement for financing the project was reached between board
members, acting under advice of Att'y J. E. Baucke, and the Warming and Ventilating company,
following which the contract was officially awarded. Delay in starting of work resulted when the board
lacked funds to pay for the installation of the new system immediately.

Janitor Is Named
Andrew Muir of Washingtonville
was appointed janitor of the school.
Contract to furnish the district's schools with coal during the 1931-32
term was awarded to the Snyder
Coal company, Leetonia.

Sebring Officials

ury.

Puts Baby's 'Brand' On Mother

In order to preclude any such embarrassment as followed in the wake of the Watkins-Bamberger "switched baby" case in Chicago, a Brooklyn, N. Y., hospital has instituted a novel plan whereby there can be no possibility of mistaken identity in the nursery. A doctor and nurse are shown "branding" her initials on the arms of Mrs.
Esther Danze with the use of a stencil and ultra-violet ray machine.
The same initials are put, in similar fashion, on the back of the infant a few moments after birth. The sunburned initials are visible for about 10 days, but can be brought to light any time within six months.

Stock Markets in Large Cities Show Favor-
able Reactions

(By Associated Press)
Negotiations already have started in Paris for a conference of experts to work out the technical details of applying President Hoover's moratorium
plan, and the British government has renewed its invitation
for a conference of the world
powers chiefly concerned.

In all the capitals of Europe
and at Washington the agreement between France and the United States was received with great satisfaction. London is of the opinion that much remains to be done and Rome has announced that it is ready to participate in any conferences regarding operation of the plan.

The German government in a proclamation has promised that the money released by the moratorium will be used only to assist the country's economic recovery, warning the German people that they must economize now as never before.

At Washington, Mr. Hoover announced the agreement with
obvious pleasure and the state
department has gone to work
on the mass of details which probably will occupy it for weeks.

Stock markets in all the large cities reacted favorably to the announcement of the accord,
with prices rising in Paris, London, Berlin and New York.

In Effect Today
PARIS, July 7.—An international agreement suspending payments on
all inter-governmental war debts arising from the World War until July 1, 1932, was in effect today as a means of resuscitating the economic life of Germany and the entire world.

American and French delegates,
after eleven days of stubborn negotiations, signed an accord shortly before midnight which accepted
President Hoover's offer to defer
remittances on inter-allied war
debts for one year providing Germany's reparations payments also were postponed. All other nations
affected previously had signified
their acceptance.

The protocol of the accord was initiated in the red drawing room
of the ministry of the interior by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew
W. Mellon and Ambassador Walter
E. Edge, representing the United States, and by Premier Pierre Laval,
Foreign Minister Aristide Briand,
Finance Minister Pierre Flandin,
and other officials representing France.

As Mr. Mellon started to affix his initials the pen broke at "A. W."
and Premier Laval smilingly handed him another. When all was done
M. Laval grasped Mr. Edge's hand
with emotion and Mr. Edge replied with a "merci beaucoup." Glasses
of champagne and orangeade graced
the conference table.

Chief Stipulations
The text of the agreement lists
the following chief stipulations:
1. Payment of intergovernmental war debts is postponed from July 1, 1931 through June 30, 1932.

2. Germany will pay the unconditional annuity of the Young plan
to the Bank of International Settlements which in turn will reloan
it to her.

3. The suspended payments will be subject to interest and will be repayable in ten annual installments beginning July 1, 1933.

Premier Laval issued a statement
pointing out that France had safeguarded her interests but had extended the olive branch to Germany.

AMERICA LOSES
MILLIONS UNDER
WAR DEBT PLAN

Sacrifice of $246,000,000
May Result As France
Accepts Moratorium

(By International News Service)
WASHINGTON, July 7.—All of President Hoover's worries were not ended today by France's acceptance
of his war debt holiday. In fact,
some of them, important ones, too,
may be said to be just starting.

The plan involves a financial sacrifice on the part of the United States treasury of some $246,000,000
for the current fiscal year which began last Wednesday. The treasury closed the fiscal year on June 30
with a deficit in excess of $900,000-000.

Unless there is an almost miraculous return in business conditions
here and abroad, treasury experts
anticipate a deficit for the current year almost as large as the $900-
000,000 written in red ink on June 30. To this must now be added the $246,000,000 which the American government is to forego during the year on Europe's indebtedness.

The money must be found somewhere to offset the expenditures
here and abroad, treasury experts
have been cut and cut until there is a general belief that little more can be pruned unless there is to be a marked diminution of governmental activities. Increasing taxes in the face of an approaching presidential campaign is politically out of the question. There remains short-term
borrowing by the treasury.

The solution, of course, would be
for business to stage such a revival
as to increase the flow of income
and corporate taxes and customs duties into the treasury to something near what they were in the
spanning days before the depression, when there were annual surpluses. Only the optimistic, however, believe this is possible.

Members of the Rotary club, the board of education and others, accompanied the body of the late Superintendent John S. Alan, who died Saturday, to his birthplace in Greenville, Pa., today.

Hundreds gathered at the Ar-
baugh funeral home, East State st., Monday night to pay last respects to Mr. Alan, for 18 years head of the city's public school system.

Rev. R. D. Walter, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of which
Mr. Alan was a member, was in charge.

Burial will be in Greenville where
he attended public school and Thiel college.

THE OTHER SIDE

Critics of the federal farm board never admit that anything it does is right. That would weaken their stand. One might imagine, however, that the farm board would enlist considerable support, say in Kansas, the wheat state. True, it hasn't raised the price of wheat any, but it probably has helped keep it from dropping out sight. At least, whatever good effects it eventually may have will be widely operative in Kansas.

How does Kansas feel about it? More specifically, how do the thousands of Kansas farmers who make a living selling wheat feel about it? Last summer, when the farm board asked for reduced wheat acreage in order to avoid creating a surplus, a spokesman for the Kansas wheat farmers said they endorsed the acreage reduction proposal because, if other states adopted it, Kansas could increase its acreage and reap what benefits were to be had. Of course there was no reduction and Kansas repeated no special benefits.

Another characteristic Kansas gesture is now available for comment. The Kansas state tax commission has ruled that more than 20,000,000 bushels of stabilization corp. Wheat stored in Kansas elevators is subject to taxation by the state and its subdivisions. The levy is estimated at a half million dollars.

This may be sound tax theory, but it's doubtful fact. The wheat can't be hidden and it can't very well be removed from the state. Further more the taxpayer is the same gentleman who appropriated millions of dollars to buy the wheat in an effort to help Kansas wheat farmers—jolly old Uncle Sam. It is a made-to-order situation for the tax commission.

Ohio farmers, and farmers in every state where wheat is not the "big crop" may be excused for not showing enthusiasm or even respectful interest in the federal government's attempts to build up the morale of farmers in the Sunflower state, if Kansas farmers permit such a tax to be levied. The idea of farm relief is fine, but if the people to be relieved want to bite the hand extended at great expense to help them it's just another fine idea gone wrong.

THEY LITTLE DREAMED

Not the least interesting comment by far on the remarkable Post-Gatty flight is that made by Orville Wright, co-inventor with his brother, Wilbur, of the first airplane ever to fly successfully.

"When Wilbur and I put our first ship into the air at Kitty Hawk in 1903, we never dreamed that a flying ship would be built to make the around the world flight and you could not have convinced us that a speed ship would make the trip in less time than nine days," he marvels. "It is astounding, the things these present-day planes will accomplish. Our ship flew, it is true, but little did we realize what was to come."

What inventor, indeed, ever has realized the possibilities of his achievement? When Watt made a practical steam engine did he look ahead and visualize the age of steam? When the many men who made distinguished contributions to man's knowledge of electricity were working, did they foresee the results of harnessing such a great power? Cryus McCormick, Eli Whitney, Robert Fulton, Alexander Graham Bell, Robert Morse, Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford—did they foresee the effect of their contributions? Perhaps, in some small measure, but as a general rule it is safe to say that no man that has vision sufficient to penetrate the curtain of time that hangs always just ahead of progress. If they could, the enormity of the project might so appal them that their inventive efforts would be frustrated. Man works with his eyes on the ground the better to do what is to be done.

What Others Say

MR. HAYS AND HIS MENTORS
Honorary, the word that Wayne B. Wheeler published for the benefit of the Anti-Saloon league's pensioners, is having its innings again in the controversy between Will H. Hays and the Federal Council of Churches. More than a year ago when it discovered that two of its representatives were on the Hays pay roll, the Federal council began an investigation into the relationship between the motion picture industry and various religious and social agencies interested in the moral tone of the "movies". It appears now from the report of this investigation that the Hays organization has made a practice of carrying representatives of these agencies on its pay roll or, as the euphemistic phrase goes, of paying them honoraria.

Rather mildly under the circumstances, but very rightly, the report condemns the practice. Certainly, if there is an advantage to be gained in sifting motion picture policy through the fingers of self-constituted guardians of public taste it can hardly escape being vitiated by subsidies from the industry. Far better for the public to take its films straight than be under the misapprehension that what it gets on the screen has the sanction of disinterested mentors.

Where the report makes its principal mistake, however, is in assuming that the guilt lies entirely with the payer and not equally with the payee. Mr. Hays has a real grievance here which he is at small pains to conceal. We are not concerned with the merits of the specific case he cites in his reply to show the capacity of "movie" mentors for demanding compensation, but no one needs to be told that the initiative in transactions of the kind is not always with the hand that gives. The Federal council would have been well advised to turn some of its scorn for the situation on the members of its own and similar bodies who have shown their willingness, if not their eagerness, to serve two masters.

But quite aside from this outstanding feature of its criticism, the report contains observations of distinct value to the student of the motion picture problem. Though it finds that the Hays organization has accomplished much good, "it is probably safe to say," the report continues, "that the public at least the church constituency—will welcome a greater willingness on the part of the Hays organization to let its achievements stand on their merits and to give less of its time and resources to the 'cultivation' of persons of influence." Then turning to the other side of the picture, it asserts that religious and social agencies are at fault in occupying themselves too exclusively with "cuts" and "eliminations". "The motion pictures can not be made good by the use of scissors," says the report.

Taken together these excerpts all but sum up the case of the people versus the "movie" producers and meddlers—New York Herald Tribune.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, July 8
The planetary configurations bearing rule on the events and conditions of this day must be interpreted as distinctly adverse. There is a portent of sudden dangers, unprofitable changes, determined obstacles as well as malicious opposition, with danger of fraud, treachery and subtle undermining of plans and new projects. It is a day calling for tenacious resistance to these, with sagacity and discernment.

These whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of open hostility as well as subtle opposition to plans and projects, with sudden visitations of wily attack, malice and treachery from many angles. With calmness, good judgment and cleverness dangers may be avoided; forewarned being forearmed. A child born on this day may be disposed to be crafty, subtle, restless and changeable, with vivid imagination, perhaps morbid outlook. It may encounter many fluctuating fortunes.

Eat Like Candy

NEW YORK Day by Day

by O.O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 7.—Joe Leblang, one of the oddest human anomalies Broadway ever turned out, is being missed more than ever along the sagging Rialto. From obscurity, he feigned the dying will with the miracle of life. "To Leblang a show" was to slash prices, fill the theater and often turn the tide.

While known as the king of the cut rate ticket brokers he was far more than that. He was a backer of hundreds of shows, a builder of theaters and the most alert theatrical prognosticator in the town. When a show flops today, it goes specially to Cain's theatrical warehouse.

But when "Abie's Irish Rose" was considered a "turkey," Leblang started it on it amazing run. He did the same thing for the critically panned "Rose Marie." Along with many others too numerous to mention. Any number of producers owe their success to Leblang.

He was a modest fellow. Now and then I would receive post-cards from him from Florida or France and with his greetings would caution: "Just a thought of you—no publicity, please." Starting in a corner cigar store he built up at 57, when he passed away, a 29 million dollar fortune.

He gave heavily to charity and much of his vast estate went to worthy humanitarian enterprises. In the beginning he bought theater passes that billposters used to exchange with small tradesmen for sticking signs in windows. And out of the simple beginning developed his big idea.

His first stand was on 6th avenue and then he took desk space in Gray's drug store at 43d and Broadway. Eventually he bought the entire building, the George M. Cohan theater next door and finally the entire Broadway block. This was, however, only one of his real estate ventures.

When a show began to droop, producers went to Leblang for a puff of life. His ticket mart under the drug store is still one of the lights of the metropolis. Its activity suggests the milling and jostling of the Stock Exchange. Twelve policemen keep crowds in line.

The private elevator for dogs has arrived, introduced by The Crocyden in East 51st street. When tenants wish to air the pooch they zip a special elevator button. The special button notifies the operator a dog and master await and on the upward and downward journey no other passengers are taken on.

James Barton, the dancer, tells of giving his mother-in-law a drink from his flask of speak-easy hooch the other evening and the next afternoon she was pitching for Brooklyn.

The friendliest orchestra in town, I think, is that in the pit of The Palace. Of all play houses it has the biggest list of regular attendants and while they are being seated there are friendly exchanges of bows and flurries of hand waves with the musicians. It is a back woods simplicity among what is, at least, theatrically, the hardest boiled audience in New York.

Incidentally a bit of old backwoods slang illuminates the Broadway patter. In encouraging a dancer, blues singer or horn-tooter to "get hot," they yell, "Let's go to town!" The phrase came originally out of the Ozarks. When a local puddle jumper pitched a mean horse shoe, executed a clever break-down or appeared in some bright new satorial touch his admirers would yell: "Look at him. He's going to town!" Back in the hills and up the forks of the creek "going to town" is the high spot of existence.

My memory of the Ozarks is blurry, having gone there but once with my father at the age of 14. In one town where we stopped we visited the Elks Club and there is an outstanding picture of the members pushing their whiskers to one side to shoot pool.

In those days it was smart to drive through the streets in the evening with one foot hanging out the side of the buggy and turning corners so the wheels scraped. And I remember the first fellow—a baking powder drummer from the city—to wear his hair feather edge among us with locks cut high and all the way round. We thought he had a dirty neck.

And there is the reply of Jimmy Durante when asked if he was going out tonight. "Not completely," he cracked.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

"Heartburn" Common in America
Heartburn is a common complaint. I think it is more frequently heard of among Americans than the citizens of other lands.

This is explained by our methods of living, of course. Europeans differ markedly in their mode of living. We are more prone to rush than they are.

The morning begins with a rush that continues throughout the day. The average American would not dream of taking an hour for his midday meal. The European would never take less.

Normally, the gastric juice content found in the stomach contains about one-half per cent hydrochloric acid. This is rather a strong percentage, but it is normally neutralized by the food, as well as the alkaline secretion of the pancreas found in the intestine. This serves to decrease the acidity to about one-fifth per cent acid.

If for any reason the food does not pass out of the stomach in normal time, no alkaline secretion is received from the intestine. Naturally if there is no dilution the stomach condition is commonly spoken of as "heartburn."

As a result there may be a disturbance of the stomach, causing some of its liquid contents to be ejected upward. This reverse action causes a burning sensation, commonly spoken of as "heartburn."

Heartburn is likely to occur where there is any kind of digestive disturbance. Rapid eating is one of the most frequent causes. In order to insure proper digestion, we should thoroughly relax and eat slowly.

Many persons are the victims of habit. Lack of appreciation of how to eat is one of the bad habits. Bad eating habits are easily acquired but more difficult to discard.

It is true that alkaline medication, such as the giving of bicarbonate of soda, will relieve heartburn. This is brought about merely because it neutralizes the acid of the stomach.

It is better to remedy heartburn by being more considerate of your stomach. Never eat in a hurry. Do not gulp your food. Chew slowly and carefully each morsel before swallowing it.

In general, avoid all fried food, greasy and rich substances. Make the mealtime an agreeable part of the day.

SECRET PLACES

By Joan Sutherland

Synopsis of Preceding Installments:

Feodor Staire, attached to the British Embassy in Paris, was 36 and unmarried, and until he met Toni Wareham, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham, had been bored by the modern, hard-boiled young girl, Antonia, or Toni, had first attracted his attention when he saw her rescue a panic-stricken pet dog from beneath a limousine in London, and later when he saw her riding in the park. On her return to Paris, he arranged to meet her through Ronald Halkett, an old friend, who a few months before had married Toni's beautiful sister Greta. They met at a party given in a Paris restaurant, danced together, Staire made an engagement for luncheon next day in the country, and when they motored back they were engaged. Greta had much time on her hands as Ronald's newspaper work kept him early and late, and she was worrying her mother and sister by being so much in the company of the wealthy Comte Henri D'Arblaye, whose reputation was not of the best. Greta was jealous of Toni, as Staire's wealth and social position would give her young sister many advantages, and when she met Feodor for the first time after their engagement, she determined to interest him in herself. At luncheon at the Ritz D'Arblaye persuaded Greta to accept a costly square-cut emerald. The giving of this gift was witnessed by Paul Ravel, the famous artist, who was a friend of Greta's mother. He sat, unobserved, behind the pair.

Installment VII
Feodor Staire, after luncheon, chose to walk back to the Embassy, and as he strode along the rue St. Honoré saw D'Arblaye's big limousine draw up a little ahead of him. A second later he saw D'Arblaye alight and hand out to no other person than Greta. She did not look around, and Feodor turned sharply into the doorway of a shop. He knew where they were going—a private gambling club run by a cievant Russian aristocrat. So Greta was gambling, and in D'Arblaye's company. Worried and disturbed for his friend, Feodor turned down a side street, and walked rapidly on.

The evening was sultry as if a storm were gathering, and Greta, who was very susceptible to atmospheric conditions, felt nervous and headachy; and, in addition, she had this time a very real anxiety to account for her mood.

Ronald was by no means a rich man, but he had sufficient to give his wife quite a charming little flat off the Place des Terres, with two excellent maids, one of whom waited upon Greta, and this evening as Greta came in, her maid, Ernestine, came out of the bedroom to meet her.

"Oh, Madame," she said, excitedly; "there are such lovely flowers come for you. They are sent from Monsieur Staire—oh, so lovely—for you to wear tonight and roses for the drawing room—orchids for you tonight, Madame—orchids for Madame's shoulder—oh, so perfect!" And for a moment Greta's languor left her.

"They are beautiful," she said. "They're my flowers, aren't they, Ernestine, mysterious, queer and beautiful?"

Ernestine nodded. She had a Frenchwoman's admiration for beauty coupled with brains, which Madame certainly had. She admired the way she ran her life, although she cordially detested her character. Still, Madame's character and Madame's little affairs were nothing to do with Ernestine.

After one more look at the flowers, Greta went on into her bedroom, locked the door, and without even removing her frock, dropped full length on the bed, staring at the opposite wall.

Why in the world had she been such a fool? What had possessed her to behave as she had done that afternoon? It was seldom she blamed herself for anything, but just now there was no possibility of blaming anyone else. D'Arblaye's invitation to the gambling club had been most casual—she need not have accepted; but partly out of curiosity, partly out of boredom, partly out of a little hope that she might make money, she had gone with him and spent an afternoon playing chemin de fer. . . chemin de fer! And she had lost eighty thousand francs in three hours. Eighty thousand! Well, she could pay it. She could raise it, but it would cripple her hopelessly for the rest of the half-year. Lady Alice had helped her too often to be applied to once more, and to ask Ronald for any further allowance was impossible. He simply didn't have it. He would certainly have given it to her if he had, Greta knew that, and a certain rare feeling of shame overcame her for a moment, then passed. After all, what right had Ronald to keep her so short? Why could he not give her all the luxuries to which she had been accustomed?

It wasn't fair, when Toni would have everything. Toni was marrying a rich man with a big position. Toni's husband could take her everywhere, do everything for her; and Toni was not half so beautiful, not half so irresistible to men as she, Greta, was. What a fool she had been to marry Ronald. She could have married anyone if she had waited. D'Arblaye was mad about her. He had even spoken of her divorcing Ronald and marrying him, until she had laughed him out of this absurd idea. Divorce Ronald!

Ridiculous! Why, she had not one shadow of love for D'Arblaye, although his fascination for her at times was undeniable. Besides, D'Arblaye was not to be trusted. If she should ever contemplate facing the divorce courts it would be for far bigger game. Oh, but this was all nonsense. What she was thinking about was that wretched debt. Eighty thousand francs! What in the world would she do until the end of the half-year? It would take all her balance at the bank to pay that, and she must pay it. She couldn't owe D'Arblaye any money. That was an impossible thing. Perhaps that had better be done before Ronnie came back. It wouldn't do for Ronnie to find out.

Yawning and weary, she pulled herself up and went across to her little escritoire, took her check-book out of the center drawer and wrote a check payable to herself, for ten thousand francs, endorsed it, and addressed the letter to Henri D'Arblaye. Then she rang the bell, and when Ernestine appeared, handed her the letter.

"Run out and post that yourself, Ernestine," she said. Relieved that the check paying a small part of her debt had gone off, Greta sank back on the bed again. She couldn't go on like this. It was revolting. Her jealousy of Toni was mounting hourly. Tonight she would see her. Toni would be the centre of attraction. Why hadn't she waited? She could have married Feodor. She could have married anybody, if only she hadn't been such a fool as to throw herself away on Ronnie. Of course, he was a dear, but he was poor. He never would make a great deal of money. He wasn't that type.

Ronnie was a gentleman and a very charming one. Ronnie loved her. She wished he did not. Men were tiresome when they were in love. They wanted so much. She wanted admiration, luxury, amusement, rather than the deep, passionate things of life; they did not appeal, they demanded too much in return.

About ten minutes to seven she heard Ronnie come in, heard him speaking to Ernestine in the hall, thought how noisy the flat was, how utterly unlike Lady Alice's beautiful apartment, or the home that Toni would have, and then, still hot and tired, and with a suspicion of a headache, got up and went into the bathroom.

It was more than an hour later that she came out, ready to go to her mother's to dinner, and met Ronnie in the hall. It seemed that he was going to accompany her after all.

"Greta darling, I'm so sorry. Ernestine tells me you have a headache. Is it bad? My dear, how lovely you look. And those orchids! They're exquisite!"

Greta looked at him languidly, and smiled.

"Yes, aren't they? Feodor sent them this afternoon. And all those roses in the drawing room. Very charming of him, wasn't it?"

"Feodor?" Ronnie echoed, and laughed. "Dear old chap, that's so like him. They're certainly your flowers, Greta. You're sure you don't feel too tired to go? I'm so sorry about your head."

Greta made a little impatient movement.

"Oh! I'm not tired at all, Ronnie, and my head will be better. Of course, I want to go; you don't suppose I want to stay here alone, do you? It's deadly enough in this flat all day."

His smile faded. "Yes, I suppose it is," he said quietly. "I'm sorry, Greta. Anyhow, you'll be going to Le Touquet next week with Lady Alice, and then on, I suppose, to Vernet?"

Greta drew her cloak around her shoulders.

"Oh, I suppose so," she said; "existing on far too few clothes, and not looking half so smart as the other women. That's the sort of thing one expects to do. Oh, well, it can't be helped. Don't look like that, Ronnie, it doesn't matter."

When they arrived at Lady Alice's Greta dropped her languor with her cloak in the hall, and went into her mother's room looking radiant.

The dinner was a great success. Toni, in a new frock of white and silver, was seated between Feodor and old D'Arzes, her godfather, who was, like herself, in great spirits. She was amusing, rather daring, full of life, and Greta, every now and then, watched her enviously. Lucky little devil, Toni. What a life she would have, and what an attractive man she was marrying.

Something Toni said made everybody laugh, and Greta looked sharply at Feodor. What did he think about his bride-to-be's smart remark, she wondered? But Feodor was watching her with a look in his eyes that she, with all her experience of men, had never yet seen in any man's eyes for herself. An expression at once of intense passion and intense tenderness—a look that suddenly made Greta not only envious of all Toni's wealth and youth and good luck, but envious of something very different, something infinitely more beautiful, more to be desired—for she knew that not even in Ronald's heart did she hold the place that Toni would hold in Feodor's.

Later there was a talk of the move to Le Touquet. Mrs. Coleman, a very pretty English woman, who was staying in Paris and had taken a villa there for a fortnight, started Toni by mentioning D'Arblaye's name to her hostess.

"I am going to have a very amusing party," she was saying. She mentioned half a dozen well-known names, all people amusing or celebrated, ending up with: "and Henri D'Arblaye. You all know him, don't you? Greta, I hear he is a special friend of yours."

Toni shot a look at her sister, and was relieved to see Greta's face remain quite calm.

"Oh, I know him very well," she said. "I dance with him a good deal. He's a beautiful dancer. Rather a bore, I think, though, otherwise."

"Do you?" Mrs. Coleman said, raising her arched brows. "Why, my dear, I thought he was a most engaging cavalier. I've constantly seen him with you. Aren't you jealous, Ronald?"

Ronald looked at his wife and laughed.

"Greta knows better than to make me jealous," he said, with marked serenity. "I should be a most terrible husband then. No, I'm not jealous. I don't dance, you see—at least very badly. Greta says I can't; and anyhow, I'm glad for her to have somebody to dance with, it would be so damned dull if she hadn't."

Lucy Coleman looked at Greta in mock envy. "What a nice, kind, accommodating husband! I wish Jack were like that. You're very lucky, Greta. I hope you appreciate it."

Greta smiled, her long dark lashes almost hiding her eyes. "Oh, yes," she said; "I appreciate it. Ronnie is very charming; but I'm sure you will be bored with D'Arblaye if he's staying with you at Le Touquet."

"I'm never bored by anybody at Le Touquet," Mrs. Coleman retorted. "After all, one can dance and one can swim, and one can always gamble; and, of course, I'm a born gambler myself. Are you?"

Women Lawyers Defend Sex in Norris Ouster

Removal of New York Woman Magistrate as Unfit Does Not Discourage Other Fair Ones From Seeking Careers in Law and on Bench.

NEW YORK—To the 600 women attorneys of New York, the removal of Jean Norris, Manhattan's first and only woman judge, from the bench, is no proof that the fairer sex lacks the impartiality and judicial temperament essential for a jurist.

The Norris dismissal is regarded merely as "extremely unfortunate," a consensus of these women lawyers shows, and by no means a death blow to feminine aspirations for public office. They feel, instead that this is the psychological time for someone to step forward and show the men just what the "representative" woman can do in the courtroom. They are already urging that another woman be appointed to succeed Mrs. Norris to offset whatever reaction may have resulted from her removal. Miss Rose Rothenberg, the first woman in New York to become assistant district attorney, is being mentioned for the post as one woman qualified to administer her office with judicial understanding, justice and mercy.

Mrs. Norris' failure was due to her personal unfitness for a judicial position and not because she was a woman, according to Lena M. Phillips, prominent attorney and international president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

tive of the qualifications of our sex for such a position. It appears significant only because there are no other women judges in Manhattan. After all, four other magistrates have also been removed and there is no outcry that men are unfit to sit on the bench. If there were a proper proportion of both sexes in the judiciary, then only would it be fair to make generalizations about women. But to condemn the rest of us on the basis of this solitary instance is grossly unjust."

The very fact that Judge Norris was harsh and unyielding with the unfortunate women who appeared before her and that her justice was tempered of steel instead of mercy, Miss Phillips said, proves that her personality was not typically feminine. The average woman's intuitive sympathy would, on the contrary, eminently fit her for the responsibility of meeting out justice.

Dr. Anna Hochfelder, assistant corporation counsel, placed the blame of Mrs. Norris' downfall to her lack of the qualities comprising judicial temperament—kindness, tolerance, broadmindedness and a deep understanding of human nature. Mrs. Norris' capability as an attorney is an important factor, Dr. Hochfelder pointed out, since a knowledge of the law is only a secondary requirement for the position of magistrate.

"The anti-feminists and men who have felt keenly the competition of women in law and business, will undoubtedly grow triumphant over the Norris case," commented Miss Lucille Pugh, who has been practicing in the New York courts for the past 23 years. "But the truth remains that out west—in Ohio and Washington are women jurists of the highest repute and respect. Their excellence on the bench has long since overcome any prejudice against their sex. They are by no means extraordinary. They are simply average women."

None of the attorneys interviewed modified their condemnation of Mrs. Norris for misusing her position and conducting herself to the prejudice of other women in office. Nor could any of them volunteer an explanation why a woman of Mrs. Norris' wide experience and travel should have failed so completely in dealing with her weaker sisters.

rape and western Asia be also good for the world?

Would it be better, in the opinion of our distinguished international financiers, if Russia were in a state of anarchy, brigandage and civil war, as in China?

Germany sympathizes with the patient who died, while doctors argued about his symptoms, as the United States and France argued about the meaning of President Hoover's perfectly straightforward moratorium proposition. Yesterday afternoon, Berlin dispatches told of the dangerous condition of the German reichsbank, in urgent need of immediate foreign credit.

Wall street did not like the looks of things. Speculators just starting are easily frightened. It is so much easier to run than to stick. In a short time, those who foolishly bought, at the highest prices, will be cashing themselves wondering why they did not buy near the bottom.

Only a wise old Rothschild can say: "I got rich selling too soon."

Yesterday King George and Queen Mary celebrated the anniversary of their wedding, in Holywood palace, at Edinburgh. Belis rang all over Britain, royal servants drank the health of their majesties in champagne.

The king and queen, perhaps, talked about the changes since that day, 38 years ago, when Queen Victoria saw them married.

King George may well have said to Queen Mary: "How things change. No more czar of Russia, emperor of Austria, king of Spain, emperor of Germany, king of Portugal. What will be the future history of that throne on which we sit, comfortable and secure?"

Killed In Crash

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 7.—D. A. Neal, 40, Kaysers, W. Va., was killed in an automobile accident near here yesterday.

Today's Pattern

Jabots are particularly good for "not-too-slim" figures, as the graceful flares disguise one's lines. Also the pointed seaming in the skirt reduces the appearance of the hips. An absence of belt prevents the cutting of the figure, yet the horizontal waistline tucks slightly mould the bodice where necessary. Stout arms will welcome the cool, comfy and very smart flared sleeves. All in all, this is an ideal style for the mature woman. Pattern 2168 makes up beautifully in lawn, georgette, voile, flat crepe, chiffon or dimity.

Obtainable only in sizes 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 40 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch fabric. Yardage for every size, and simple exact instructions are given. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

Post's and Gatty's Flight Brings Other Fast Globe-Girdlers to Mind

Remarkable Speed Shown by Intrepid Pair in Circling the World Greatly Eclipses Records Set by Early Navigators of Sea, 'Round-World Army' Fliers, the German Graf Zeppelin and Others.

U. S. ARMY 'ROUND WORLD FLIERS

NEW YORK, July 7.—Now that Post and Gatty are safely back among us after completing a circuit of the earth in the undreamed of time of 18 days 15 hours, during which they put such places as Novosibirsk, Irkutsk, Blagovestchensk and Kharborovsk—which the average person can't even pronounce—on the map, we may look forward to many attempts to lower their great record.

There are always enterprising people with an abounding faith in their ability to go one better than the other fellow and records are their meat.

Naturally the question arises: Who started all this 'round the world competition? For the answer we must go back some 400 years when Ferdinand Magellan caused the skeptics of the period to make loud queries as to his sanity by setting sail from Seville, Spain, with the intention of circumnavigating the globe. Magellan's ship did complete "the" circuit, in 1,083 days, but the gallant rover never lived to see the end of the adventure. He was killed in the Philippines enroute.

The next man to have his sanity questioned on the round-the-world score was Jules Verne, who had his character, Phineas Fogg, make a fictitious circuit of the earth in 80 days. But even a fictitious record wasn't allowed to stand and so we find Nellie Bly, an adventurous newspaper woman, attacking and beating Fogg's record by completing a trip round the world in 72 days, 6 hours and 11 minutes.

With the advent of the airplane, speed records in all fields felt thick and fast. Small wonder then that we find the United States Army fliers setting a new record for girdling the globe in 1924. The men who took part in the great venture are above left to right: Lt. C. D. Schulze, Lt. E. H. Nelson, Lt. L. P. Arnold, Lt. Leigh Wadd, Captain Lowell Smith, and Lt. John Harding, Jr.

The army flight of planes flew the big circle in 14 days, 15 hours actual flying time, but it took 175 days to get in that two weeks of flying.

Then along came John H. Mears who, with the late Captain C. B. D. Collyer, made the round trip by plane and ship in 23 days, 15 hours and 21 minutes. That was in 1928.

The following year the Graf Zeppelin, commanded by Dr. Hugo Eckener, broke all records by flying from Lakehurst, N. J., around the world and back to the starting point in 21 days, 7 hours and 34 minutes, total elapsed time. Of course the actual flying time was a great deal less than that.

That record was considered almost unbeatable and when Post and Gatty announced their intention of surpassing it there was no lack of cold water throwers. Now the world knows how they made good, but when some ambitious flier gaily sets out to emulate their feat in half their time, and the world will again turn skeptical and go Missouri.

It is an astonishing fact that we regard as foolhardy any attempt to do something that has never been done before; then when the attempt succeeds we roll our eyes in wonder and murmur "marvelous." And it will be just like that when some Post or Gatty knocks the world for a loop by returning from the moon with the fingerprints of the man therein to dispell our skepticism.

LONDON LARGEST CITY IN WORLD

New York City Second to English Metropolis; Berlin Is Third

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 7.—The population race of the world's great cities continues at a staggering pace.

London Leads World

London, which has just counted its metropolitan population at more than 8,000,000 retains its world lead, with New York not far behind for the city proper, although far ahead on the basis of its own metropolitan area.

Berlin remains in third place, Chicago is fourth and Paris fifth, although the Metropolitan population of the French capital is larger than that of Chicago.

The five leading cities on the basis of new census figures, are: Greater London, 8,202,818; New York City, 6,981,915; Berlin, 4,296,000; Chicago, 3,376,438; Paris (with in walls) 2,871,039.

While the cities themselves have added hundreds of thousands of inhabitants in the last decade, even more startling is the growth of the metropolitan areas. For instance, Chicago suburbs are growing at a rate far higher than that of the city proper.

New York Increases

Paris within the walls counts only 2,871,038, but the population outside of the fortifications numbers 2,016,425, or a total of 4,887,464 for the metropolitan district.

New York City, restricted to the population of the five boroughs of Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn, Richmond and the Bronx, trembled on the verge of 7,000,000 in the 1930 census count. The New York metropolitan area, however, including portions of New Jersey and Connecticut and corresponding more nearly to what is known as greater London, numbers 11,000,000,000 souls.

SLAYER SOUGHT IN OHIO DEATH

Body of Racketeer Found Near Cleveland; Probe Salesman's Death

CLEVELAND, July 7.—The slaying of one man and the death of another whom police think may have been assaulted, were being investigated today.

One of the men, Larry (Akron) Rubin, of Cleveland, known to the police as a notorious racketeer was found slain a mile north of Parkman, last night. A man who fled from the automobile in which the body was discovered was captured. He gave his name as G. Farah.

Rubin was clubbed to death with the butt of a revolver, and shot through the chest. His body was left in the car parked along side the road, and found by passersby when they became suspicious of a man, believed to have been Farah, who signalled for other cars to pass.

Police believe the slaying was another instance of gangster vengeance.

County Coroner A. J. Pearce was to conduct an autopsy to determine the cause of the death of Harry E. Smith, 58, real estate salesman, whose body was found last night in his apartment.

Although police believed the man may have succumbed to a heat attack about four days ago, a bruise on his hip and a scratch on the forehead led them to make a further

Look Different—Act Alike

To settle once and for all a long-fought argument as to the comparative climbing abilities of the orthodox plane and the revolutionary autogyro, a novel test was held recently at Roosevelt Field, N. Y. The autogyro in the foreground, piloted by Andy J. Nielsen, and the Bird plane, piloted by William Marsalis, are shown taking off at the exact same angle after runs of equal distances. They were given a tied score by the judges. That ought to satisfy backers of both craft.

FANS MOURN J. S. ALAN
CANCEL GRAPPLE SHOW

The death of Supt. John S. Alan is mourned by Salem's sporting public. Fans here regarded Mr. Alan as an enthusiastic backer of all types of scholastic athletic activities, a man who played a prominent role in success of Salem High teams.

Mr. Alan continually cooperated with coaches in the development of the Red and Black's peerless athletic system, aided in formation of plans which resulted in the construction of Reilly athletic stadium, and was a faithful spectator at all games. He took the games seriously, too, was as happy in victory, or as sad in defeat, as any player or student.

John S. Alan for 18 years was a prominent figure in more than the usual educational events in a school. He made his presence felt in all interscholastic activities and the school and its students were the beneficiaries.

Transylvanians in Ohio and Pennsylvania are already beginning to show enthusiasm in the 1931-32 basketball race in the Pennsylvania-Ohio German eagle league, and, in their recent convention held here, officials predicted the coming competition as the most promising in the organization's history. Three states, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana, will be represented.

The league will be increased from a five to eight team battle with the entrance of Gary, Ind., Youngstown and Erie, Pa. Additional entries may be obtained for another circuit from Lorain, Monaco, Pa., New Castle, Ellwood City, Martins Ferry and Farrell.

Frederick Theiss of Salem was elected second vice president of the league. Several changes were made in rules, among them being numerous regulations which, if enforced, would seriously affect Salem teams. One of these, stipulating that "players must be of either Saxon or German origin," may mean the ineligibility of three Salem mainstays.

Prevailing heat has forced the abandonment, at least temporarily, of plans for a wrestling show at the World War Memorial building. Lack of interest in similar shows in nearby cities too, has affected plans of sponsors, it appearing that Youngstown is the only city in which grunt artists can attract throngs.

WATKINS GIVEN GREAT SUPPORT IN 6-3 VICTORY

Errors In First Two Innings Give Champions Early 4-Run Lead

BATTING RALLY IN 7th FALLS SHORT

Ohio-Edison Loses Close Decision to Community Station Team, 5-4

Fielding sensationally back of Sam Watkins, the Mullins Foremen's club started its drive for the second half of softball league championship Monday night handing the Salem Hardware team a 6-3 setback at Centennial park field.

Watkins Hit Hard
Hit hard by the losing team's sluggers, Watkins was given spectacular support by fielders who rammed into all sections of the field to take hard chances and avert defeat. Both clubs collected eight hits but five misplays proved fatal to the Hardware.

Mullins took advantage of two errors in the first frame to tally twice then added another brace of runs in the second on two more misplays. The team put the game on ice with a couple more in the fifth, the losers putting up one of their worst games of the season.

Joe Dorchee, getting three hits in three times at bat, and Mart Debnar, with two safeties, led Mullins' attack at bat. Twice the Hardware had two men on base with none but fine fielding work pulled Watkins out of the pinch. Jim Primm hit safely twice out of three times up.

Ohio Edison Loses
The last-inning jinx that followed the Ohio Edison team throughout the first half again proved disastrous as the Community Service Station tallied twice in the last half of the seventh to annex a 5-4 verdict.

Poor fielding marred the contest, the winners committing six misplays and the losers five. Both teams gathered in five bingles. Mailman Bill Carlisle climbing out of a batting slump to collect three singles for the victors.

JOHNNY FLORIO TOPS AMATEURS

1929 Ohio Champion Only Player To Register Par Score Monday

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., July 7.—Amateur golfers of the Buckeye state renewed their attack on old man par at Wyandot today as they started the second 18 hole qualifying round of the annual state championship to eliminate all but 32 who will continue the battle Wednesday for the crown won by Glenn Bishop.

Scores Mount High
Wyandot withstood the assault yesterday, the rugged course sending scores mounting skyward. So completely did it subdue the Simon Pures that only a dozen out of the 115 starters succeeded in breaking 80.

Johnny Florio, state champion in 1929, was the only player near par figures, turning in a 72 for the round, one over. He was trailed by Mike Godman, another Columbus entry, who posted a 73.

By taking the lead Florio established himself as a distinct favorite to regain the crown.
Plan Consolation Tiffs
With the first day scores soaring as high as 103, many believed that scores as high as 164 would enter the championship flight Wednesday. The remainder of the field will be paired into two other consolation flights, at match play.

Bishop, the defending champion, got away to a shaky lead yesterday, touring the course in 81, placing himself in a position so that he can fill any mistakes today.

One figure who will bear watching is Jack Munro, Akron, who held the crown in 1923. Munro posted a 77 yesterday which practically assures himself a place in the championship flight.

DOUBLES CHAMPIONS RETAIN CLUB CROWN

French Noses Out Hartsock In Great Battle Monday Afternoon

Thomas French, ace of Salem High's 1931 Northeastern Ohio district championship team, won the Salem Country club tennis championship, defeating Walter Hartsock in a series of sensational sets at the club's courts Monday afternoon.

Match Closely Fought
French took the odd set out of five, every contest being among the best played at the club in years. Scores were 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, 0-6 and 6-1.

The new titleholder succeeds Richard ("Dick") Harwood, youthful flash who furnished the surprise in 1930 by defeating the field of classy contenders which annually competes in Country club racket activities. Harwood was eliminated by French in semi-finals, 5-7, 6-3, 9-7.

Tom Moore and Hartsock retained their doubles crown by defeating John Carpenter and Bob Campbell, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, 1-6 and 6-1 in finals. Carpenter and Campbell, "darkhouse" entries, furnished one of the tourney's sensations by defeating Bob Davis and Kenny

ELLIOTT HURLS PHILS TO WIN OVER BROOKLYN

Robins Drop 5-3 Verdict; Indians Hit Hard To Trim Tigers, 13-4

(By Associated Press)

It still is a matter of conjecture whether the Brooklyn Robins got the better of the deal whereby they parted with Jumbo Jim Elliott and two other players in exchange for Lefty O'Doul and Presco Thompson. At any rate, it would appear that the jovial Uncle Robbie made a tactical error in turning Elliott over to a club in the same league. Since joining the Phillies the big fellow has pitched fine ball against all comers, but he has been particularly poisonous to his former mates.

Allows Six Hits

Facing his former pals yesterday for the seventh time this year, Elliott turned in his fifth victory over the flock, 5 to 3. He held them to six hits and was their master all the way.

There seems to be a law incidentally against the Robins winning six straight. Yesterday marked the fourth time this season they have met defeat after a run of five consecutive victories. The reverse cost them a virtual tie with the Giants for third place, as rain held the McGraw men idle at Boston.

The St. Louis Cardinals went into the final inning one town to the Chicago Cubs, but they emerged with a 6 to 5 victory. A walk to Sparky Adams and successive doubles by Jim Collins and Wally Roettger scored two runs and defeated Bob Smith.

A's Senators Tie

Washington and Philadelphia, meeting in the second game of their important American league series might have been battling yet but for a downpour that cleared the diamond in the last of the eighth. Neither Rube Walbert nor Bump Hadley had allowed a run up to that time, and they were getting stronger all the time. The Senators, however, had a runner on second and only one out when the Umpires motioned them in.

Vic Frasier, the White Sox rookie righthander, yielded only five hits and struck out nine batters in subduing the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 3. Home runs by Goose Goslin and Oscar Melillo accounted for all the Browns' runs.

COURT NEWS

In Common Pleas

There has been a settlement at the costs of the defendant in the case of C. S. Carr, as administrator, against Frances C. Moore, without further record.

A report of a sale has been confirmed by the court in the case of Rodney T. Ogle, as administrator, against Margaret J. Riddle. This was an action to sell real estate to pay debts.

A jury has been withdrawn and the cause continued in the action filed by Dorisella Higgins, as administrator, against William T. Anderson Co.

In the case of George W. Golden and others against W. J. Barlow as sheriff, the prayer of the petition has been allowed by the court. A deed has been held to be null and void, and has also been rescinded by the plaintiffs, Margaret and Rachel Golden, by reason of their minority. The defendant sheriff has been restrained from carrying out an order from selling more than one-half of the premises to satisfy a judgment obtained by Barney Green.

Amend Petition

In the injunction proceedings filed by Kim Crawford and others against the county commissioners to prevent the collection of a special road assessment, the court has granted leave to the plaintiff to file an amended petition at once. The injunction sought by the petitioner has been allowed.

There has been a settlement out of court in the dissolution of partnership action filed by John Vati against John Tullis, with costs paid. Motion for a new trial has been overruled in the case of Jane R. Phillips against the City of East Liverpool, and a judgment has been entered on the verdict for $225 in favor of plaintiff, also for the costs. Exceptions have been saved for the defendant.

There has been a hearing on the second cause of action in the petition filed by Bell Finley against J. B. Manley, and the prayer has been denied with the case dismissed. The court has fixed the appeal bond at $200.

After a motion for a new trial was overruled in the case of Mary G. Dyball against T. T. Church, the court ordered each party to pay their own costs. When this cause was recently tried before a jury, a verdict was returned in favor of the defendant.

A motion to the second amended petition has been overruled in the case of William J. Winland against the William Erlanger Co., with exceptions entered for the defendant.

No decision has been handed down in the case of the Village of Lisbon against Neill and O. C. Caldwell, an action filed for the purpose of having the court compel the defendants from removing an obstruction from the street fronting property of the defendant. Judge W. F. Wilkins made the reservation in the hope that the interested parties could come to an agreement, and if not an order would be made. A supplemental motion has been sustained in the case of Kary E. Fraser as executrix against J. H. Irwin and others.
